To Whom it May Concern,

We were both born and raised and are now raising our boys in the RM. of Springfield. Since we were young we knew that our water was the most pristine. We grew up next to what used to be Heidelberg Park, where they used to pump water to make Heidelberg beer. City folk used to come get water from our family farm to brew their homeade wine and beer. Never once while we were growing up did we ever think that we would have to be writing to the Clean Environment Commission begging them to save and protect our water. We all know that it is the most precious resource we have. Without it there is and will be nothing. No amount of money or political pressure should play part in making the decision in allowing this prices to take place.

Stop and think, even if there was a 1% chance of a catastrophe happening and let's be honest the percentage is way higher. Why would you gamble that on water, one of the only things that is essential in life.

Whoever thought water would be worth more money per liter than drinking water?

I don't know about you? But I'd rather see people travel to Mars in search of silica sand than water.

Very concerned citizens
Craig and Jolene Byers
